

www.mruni.eu

Mykolas Romeris University (MRU), a public institution, is an international university located in Northern Europe. Each year the University admits a large number of creative and talented young people.

Receptive to change, promoting intellectually stimulating studies and focused on consistent research activities, Mykolas Romeris

University contributes to the development of a well-rounded personality: a mature, enterprising and independent future leader and a responsible citizen.

The University has nearly 22,000 students who stand out as highly-motivated and enthusiastic about their chosen field of studies. The study programmes are continuously renewed and updated, responding to the needs of society and providing young people with knowledge and skills necessary to build a successful career.

Mykolas Romeris University promotes international activities and is proud of its participation in research on European and international levels. The University actively cooperates with international organizations, encourages students' and lecturers' mobility, takes part in international research projects, as well as implements and creates joint study programmes, enabling students to acquire double or triple degrees. University students, lecturers and research staff have become part of a uniform international studies and research system where all partners strive to deliver success.

The 2011-2012 academic year at Mykolas Romeris University has begun with introducing not only updated study curricula, but also a particularly relevant priority – promoting entrepreneurship across all study programmes.

Mykolas Romeris University encourages dialogue between individuals, who value different viewpoints and treat each other with respect. Undoubtedly, such an environment contributes to everyone's intellectual development and well-being.

Faculty of Social Policy at Mykolas Romeris University provides education for future experts in the field of social services by offering coherent study programs of social sciences which, apart from professional knowledge, comprise other associated subject areas as well: Psychology, Social Work, Educology, Sociology and Law, Political Sciences, Philosophy, Social Policy, Social Services, Demography and Economics.

International Activities

The University's international ties span all the regions of the globe. It has affiliations with more than 400 foreign academic and state institutions. From 2006, the University offers joint Master's degree study programmes and encourages its students to attain double or triple diplomas. One of the goals of University's internationalization is student diversification, thus the number of international students is continually growing. This enables both Lithuanian and international students to share experiences and ideas as well as to work together on joint international projects, expanding their world views and cultural awareness.

The University is a member of 29 international organizations and networks.

https://www.mruni.eu/en/university/naryste/membership_in_organizations_and_networks.php